ABOUT SERGE LEBON

Serge Leblon is often described as a photographer. Yet cinema plays a central role in his work. As Roland Barthes wrote: “When I know I am being looked at, I transform myself into an image.”

In Serge Leblon’s work, the line between reality and fiction is remarkably thin. This is perhaps what gives his images such a singular retinal pleasure. Could this be an aesthetics of the off screen? In any case, beyond the frame, objects and things are left to speak – often revealing more about an atmosphere than any possible subject in action.

Here, atmosphere becomes a “time image,” waiting to be inhabited. Serge Leblon thus develops an aesthetics of the uninhabited – or the delicately inhabited – through images of exquisite fragility.

ABOUT PARADIS SUPERSTORE

Paradis Superstore is more than a superstore – it is a cultural landmark in uptown Brussels, blending art books, independent fashion, collectible toys, and design objects into one carefully curated lifestyle destination.

And now, PARADIS has its own exhibition space: PARADIS ART, located inside the superstore.

We bring together a sharp selection of contemporary fashion, rare and new art books, magazines, toys, and thoughtful accessories. From A24’s complete publishing line to Apartamento editions, from emerging fashion labels to Tokyo-sourced figures and collectibles, our store is a crossroads of global culture.

Paradis Superstore is more than a shop. It is a living editorial – every object, garment, or publication tells a story. We value clarity over clutter, instinct over trends, and a sense of what feels culturally alive.

We are not defined by category. We are not trend-driven.

We are a Brussels store shaped by ideas, design, and discovery — things that speak, and stay with you.
