

Gilles Dewavrin

Perfumed wax

The decorative item that makes your house a fragrant home. To enjoy for years to come ...

An artisan creation made in France and Italy

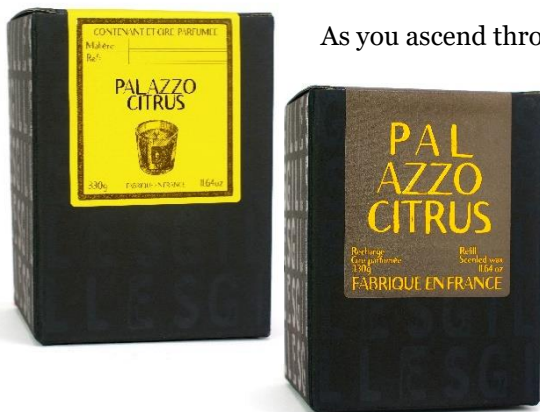

Gilles Dewavrin's perfumed waxes are crafted in Italy and France. Available in earthenware and glass, the holders are carefully and limitedly made by passionate artisans. This makes these holders for perfumed wax true decorative gems. They stand out beautifully on single or double saucers, which are specially designed for this purpose.

Tea Garden Express

Is the train not the most charming way to travel across and to learn about another country? How can we not be seduced, looking out of the window at the rolling countryside? It's like seeing the magical reflection of a very real dream! Tea, jasmine, rose; these aromas float through our unconscious. They stir up a passionate desire to go on a journey to an unknown destination. Kerala isn't far, the night is warm..... Let's make the most of this happiness, of the chance to travel through just a small part of this vast and fascinating region of India.

Palazzo Citrus

As you ascend through the winding and dizzying narrow roads, you might experience vertigo, but it's all to reach a pure paradise. Many enthusiasts are drawn to this part of the world. The reason being is that it resembles a rather romantic movie set, yet it's also rich in history. DH Lawrence wrote a part of "Lady Chatterley's lover" here, Truman Capote must have stayed there with his "swans", Slim Aarons with his camera. The scent of orange blossoms, lime and verbena lingers in this place that once hosted an entire era and will continue to captivate the dreams of many others.

A hotel overlooking the amalfi coast.

Greek Summer

Figs are known to be the favourite fruits of the ancient Greeks. August is celebrated as the month of the fig in this country, as this delicious fruit is at its ripest and juiciest at this time. It is, for me personally, synonymous with sunshine, warmth and a long summer spent bathing in the sea. It also reminds me of Gerald Durrell's novel "my family and other animals", read on the benches at school....quite some time ago. One cannot think of Greece without remembering the beauty of its islands, from Hydra to Corfu....among many others. A summer spent surrounded by those small and blue houses, their narrow and winding streets, the proximity of a turquoise sea. A simple life dedicated to contemplation, feeding on savoury fresh fruits and vegetables. Isn't this the perfect image of paradise?

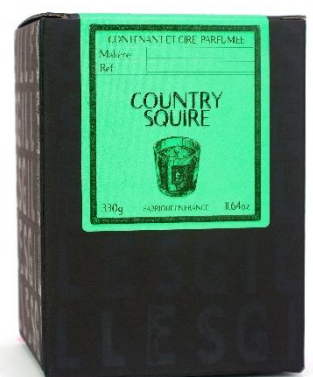

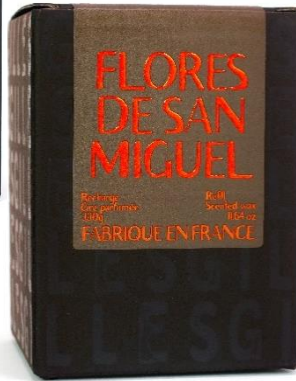

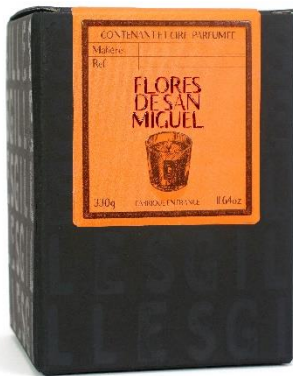

Midnight marks the start of a new day, the transition from one day to the next, a time for celebration. A story, told in the serenity of the night, can gently guide you into a state of slumber or help you to prolong a dream, your eyes wide open. The aroma of green mint tea permeates the room, enhancing the narrator's story and igniting the audience's imagination. An atmosphere reminiscent of the "thousands and one nights", exotic and captivating; one might even feel grateful for this receptive state induced by insomnia.

Midnight Tales

Country Squire

Feel the atmosphere of a little house in the country, surrounded by a forest with animals who have made the land and garden their own slice of paradise. Inside, we see a charming, warm and slightly hazy decor which releases scents of mandarin, cardamom, honey, cloves, and other aromas. The owner, somewhat bohemian, loves to surround himself with these animals with which he shares his life, his existence and his heart.

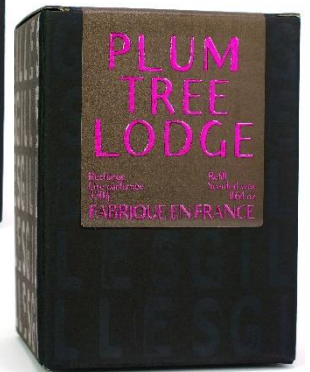

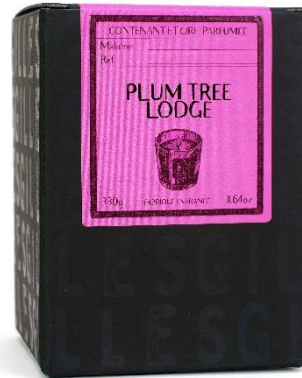

Make the most of the heat and Mexican folklore, and let yourself be seduced by the tuberose and jasmine in the gardens of this colourful and irresistibly charming city. Large half open doors hide impressive baroque and neo-gothic mansions, surrounded by gardens and fountains that exude elegance and sensuality. The neighbouring houses, slightly more modest, are painted in bright hues of pink and various shades of yellow, and give off these extraordinary and exhilarating perfumed floral clouds. This decor stands out so perfectly well under the bright sunshine that illuminates an unforgettable destination.

Flores de san Miguel

Plum Tree Lodge

A place somewhere on an island in Scotland, close to the sea. One would find a somewhat magical dwelling that would at times appear as an inn from which waft scents of candied fruits, caramel, spices, notes of amber and tobacco. At other times it would resemble a majestic hotel with a grandiose decor reminiscent of those ancient palaces with unforgettable charm that one once admired scattered along the European coasts. In any case, regardless of its appearance, don't we want to get acquainted and to discover this seductive place?a "chameleon" location with multiple olfactory journeys.
